Celebrating Military Families: In November, commissaries recognize uniqueness, sacrifices of service lifestyle

Military life is not easy on families. Theirs is an ever-changing environment brought on by continuous military moves. It means frequent extended absences of a spouse.

For Lisa Molinari, who writes the military family blog "The Meat and Potatoes of Life," it meant difficulties maintaining a legal career with such a transient lifestyle – 11 moves within eight different locations. It also meant caring for a special needs son while in duty stations with limited services.

"It's the little things and frankly, when someone tells my husband – or even me – 'Thank you for your service,' this means so much more than one might expect," said Molinari, a long-time Navy spouse. To read the rest of Lisa's story, click here.

A taste of home: Commissaries offer special savings on holiday meal essentials

In 13 countries around the world, commissaries are gearing up to offer the military community a taste of home for the holiday season.

"Whether you'll be celebrating the holidays while stationed abroad or at home with your loved ones, visit your commissary for the ingredients you'll need to cook up holiday memories flavored with the familiar tastes of home," said Tracie Russ, Defense Commissary Agency director of sales.

Throughout November, military commissaries are offering discounts beyond everyday savings, including special holiday deals. DeCA encourages customers to check displays at the end of the aisles, where stores showcase products with extra-low prices. For more information click here.

Colorado Weather

As most of you know, Colorado weather can be tricky and change from one day to the next, and even from hour to hour. Make sure you check the weather when planning your next outing to ensure that you are prepared for whatever may come your way. Just because it's cloudy, does not mean you do not need sunscreen. You can still get a sunburn, so wear sunscreen to avoid sunburn. Also, the fall/winter air can be very dry, so be sure to drink plenty of water!
