Fisher House awards scholarship grants to 500 military family children

FORT LEE, Va. – Even as the COVID-19 pandemic continued to affect college and university academic schedules this year, the Fisher House Foundation’s popular Scholarships for Military Children program once again came through for 500 students who were each awarded a $2,000 scholarship grant for the upcoming 2022 - 2023 school year.

Fisher House Foundation, a nonprofit organization that helps service members and their families, created the program in 2001 in partnership with the Defense Commissary Agency (DeCA) to recognize the contributions of military families to the readiness of the fighting force and celebrate the commissaries’ role in enhancing the military’s quality of life. “It is a true blessing that the Fisher House Foundation is able to administer the Scholarships for Military Children and award scholarships to so many deserving students,” said Todd Heasley, DeCA’s scholarships program liaison. WHAT'S YOUR PLAN?

Commissaries offer savings on emergency supplies

FORT LEE, Va. – Since 2020, the sheer number of severe storms exhausted the list of designated names. According to meteorologists, the outlook for 2022 is more of the same.

Before the next hurricane or other severe storm occurs, the Defense Commissary Agency advises its patrons to be prepared and use their benefit to save money on their emergency supplies, said Marine Sgt. Maj. Michael R. Saucedo, the Defense Commissary Agency’s senior enlisted advisor to the DeCA director.

“As service members we are taught to always be prepared for the worst-case scenario,” Saucedo said. “When it comes to your home, an ounce of prevention is way better than looking for a grocery store after the storm hits. Create a disaster plan and use your commissary to help you save 20-25 percent on your emergency supplies.” To read more, click here.
